INTRODUCTION

For many years librarians and historical researchers have had to rely on a Union Catalogue of Newspapers which was both out of date (1961) and out of print. This present publication goes a considerable way to meeting their needs, and I am pleased to make the information it contains available. Its scope - holdings of New Zealand newspapers published before 1940 - is explained by its origins (as Mr Harvey explains in his preface) in a 1983 survey of the physical condition of these papers.

The prime objective of the survey was to provide the National Library's Microfilm Production Unit with the information necessary to ensure that the newspapers in worst condition were archivally filmed before it was too late. When Mr Harvey's report was completed it was clear that the bibliographical information gathered in the course of the survey was of sufficient value and use that it should be capitalised on and made available in an appropriate form, despite the scope restrictions. These have been usefully broadened by the inclusion of microfilm holdings.

At the time, without the financial support of the Trustees of the National Library, it would not have been possible to carry out the survey, and I would like to thank them for their commitment of what was a substantial proportion of the funds they had available. A contribution from Carter Holt Holdings Limited is also gratefully acknowledged.

The Trustees recognised that the problem of deteriorating newspapers, which are a national information resource, not just a National Library one, was a national preservation problem, and it was therefore appropriate for them to fund the survey. They were justifiably impressed and convinced of the importance of their investment when they saw the content and quality of work in Mr Harvey's report, and I endorse their opinion.

The National Library's archival microfilming programme is an important contribution to the preservation of essential historical research resource material, and to making it more widely available. Bibliographical recording of our national printed output is one of our major responsibilities. I am pleased that these two commitments have come together and resulted in this particular publication.

There is, of course, much remaining to be done in completing our knowledge of the condition and holdings of newspapers. I am optimistic that this will be achieved within the next few years, and that this first contribution should be seen not just as an end in itself, but as an intermediate step. Nevertheless, I have no doubt this present work will be welcomed for what it is.

PREFACE

This list differs from the first and second editions of A union catalogue of New Zealand newspapers (Wellington : General Assembly Library, 1938, 1961). Unlike those works, it includes only holdings located in New Zealand of newspapers published in this country, and only those New Zealand newspapers published before 1940. It lists holdings of original newspapers and microfilm copies located in libraries (public, university, museum, and the National Library of New Zealand), in museums, in the possession of historical societies, in newspaper offices, and in local authority possession. No private holdings have been included, even where they are unique and extensive. It also includes some indication of where indexes to newspapers are held.

Most of the information on which this list is based was gathered during 1983 for the Survey of New Zealand newspapers. This survey, funded by the Trustees of the National Library of New Zealand, aimed to identify holdings of New Zealand newspapers in this country and to assess their condition, in order to establish priorities for the preservation on microfilm of this valuable resource. As it is difficult to use the Survey's final report, which includes much detail about the physical conditions of holdings, as a finding list, it was decided to publish a condensed version of the Survey in the form of this Union list of New Zealand newspapers published before 1940, to meet the needs of the library and scholarly communities.

Information about holdings of the original newspapers was gathered when they were inspected at their locations during the Survey. Information about microfilm holdings and indexes was subsequently solicited by means of a questionnaire, and consequently the quality varies considerably, and is not usually as precise as for holdings of the originals.

"Newspapers" have been defined here in a slightly narrower sense than in the previous lists. Excluded from this list are student newspapers, New Zealand Expeditionary Forces and troopship newspapers, shipboard newspapers, holdings consisting only of pictorial sections and inserts, sports newspapers, prohibition newspapers, religious newspapers (with some exceptions), and Christmas and some other special issues.

Duplicate holdings of original copies are not included. Also omitted are some holdings of isolated issues of widely held titles. These are usually of popular weeklies such as the Auckland weekly news and New Zealand free lance, but also include some major dailies such as the New Zealand herald. No listings of clippings have been included, even when they represent the only extant fragments of a newspaper. Some facsimile issues have been included, but have not been thoroughly recorded.

Entries are arranged geographically according to place of publication, then alphabetically by the latest title used up to 1940. For each title, information is given in this order:

- Dates of first and last issues. The lack of a final date indicates that the newspaper is still published, or ceased after 1939;
- Place of publication, if it differs from the place under which the title is entered;

- Previous titles, with dates of title changes;
- Frequency, with dates of alteration;
- Indexes: scope, period covered, and location (see below);
- Holdings, arranged alphabetically by sigla of location, then within that by original and facsimile copies, followed by microfilms.

All information which is conjectural is suffixed by "?". Titles beginning with "N.Z." and "New Zealand" are interfiled.

Particular care should be taken with indications of microfilm holdings, which often give only the start and terminal dates of the holdings and do not specify the completeness of the run. No detailed listing has yet been made of the issues filmed by the National Library's Microfilm Production Unit, which is the source of most microfilm held by New Zealand libraries. Microfilm holdings listed under their sigla (WNMP) are not available for use, but can be purchased: inquiries should be directed to the Administration Officer, Microfilm Production Unit, National Library of New Zealand, Private Bag, Wellington. Care should likewise be taken with all holdings statements, which give no indication of the completeness of any issue.

The scope of indexes is given in parentheses:

- (comprehensive) regional, national and international events
- (genealogical) primarily of persons, especially births, deaths and marriages
- (international) international events only are indexed
- (local) regional activities only are indexed
- (shipping) passenger lists only are indexed.

Some of the indexes listed here are in progress and may not be completed yet. Indexes compiled by newspaper offices for internal use have not generally been listed.

The following abbreviations and symbols have been used:

(f)	facsimile
(m)	microfilm or microfiche
(& m )	microfilm held in addition to the originals
(suppl)	supplement
Ja, F, Mr, Ap, My, Je,	abbreviations for months of the
Jy, Ag, S, O, N, D	year
(p)	photocopy
*	indicates that the holding could not be fully examined, and details may not be precise
iss	issue(s)
v	varies (used to indicate frequency)
w	weekly
m	monthly
lacks some iss	a few issues are missing
lacks many iss	many issues are missing

Inclusion of information about holdings in this list does not guarantee access to the prospective user, who is strongly urged to contact the institution whose holdings it is intended to examine before visiting. This applies specially to some newspaper offices, and to some libraries which restrict access while appropriate conservation measures are carried out.

Any omissions, alterations and errors should be reported to the Librarian-in-Charge, Bibliographic Unit, National Library of New Zealand, Private Bag, Wellington, for inclusion in updates or new editions.

Thanks are due to the many librarians, private individuals and custodians who assisted in the Survey and in the compilation of this list. They should, however, not be held responsible for any errors or omissions, which remain the responsibility of the compiler.

D.R. HARVEY
