The land is so stony that it is unfit for cultivation or profitable occupation, excepting to graze sheep on. The full value of the land on deferred-payment conditions is £2 per acre. The licensees ask for a reduction of the rent. The conditions of the license have not been fully carried out, but, considering the quality of the land, this could hardly be expected.

After a considerable amount of trouble and expense the Government retook possession, as Lewis would not comply with the conditions; the result being that Lewis, out of spite, runs the section on behalf of his son-in-law against his neighbours, regardless of the result, and he now tells me he is about to apply for a reduction in the price. It is just one of the cases in which a man should abide by his own actions.
