- 51. Huoi.—Grows on good soil, chiefly river-banks, &c. Not durable. Suitable for paper-making Very suitable for cultivation in gardens.
- 52. Wharangi.—Grows on sea-coast. Rare. Not durable, and too small to be of any use. Not used. Poisonous to horses and cattle.
- 53. Kaikomako.—Grows on river-flats near the coast. Not durable, or in any quantity to be of value. Not used. Very rare, odd trees being found in northern part of district.
- 54. Ake.—Grows on sea-coast (strictly littoral). Durable, hard, tough, excellent for mauls or where hard woods are required. Used for mauls and fence-posts. Rare. Few trees on beach at Totara, Buller, and Karamea Rivers. Most suitable for garden-hedge; grows quickly.
- 55. Karaka.—Grows on sea-coast. Not durable. Not enough to be of any value. Not used. Rare. Very few trees found along the coast. Suitable for garden-cultivation.
- 56. Putaputa weta.—Grows on sea-coast and hills. Not durable. Suitable for paper-making. Not used. Scattered in small quantities throughout the district.
- 57. Kumarahou.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Not durable. Suitable for paper-making. Used occasionally as mine-props. Scattered in small quantities throughout the district.
- 59. Manuka (Kahikatoa).—Grows on river-flats, also poor land. Fairly durable. Used for fence-posts and firewood. Small quantity found throughout the district.
- 62. Robutu.—Grows on river-flats, edge of forest. Not durable, and too small to be of any use. Not used. Small quantities found throughout the district.
- 63. Robutu.—Grows on sea-coast to about 1,500 ft. Not durable. Not used. Small quantities found in the district.
- 64. Kotukutuku.—Grows in shady gullies, good soil, river-flats. Old trees are durable. Suitable for fence-posts. Used for fence-posts. Small quantity found throughout the district.
- 65. Horoeka (Lancewood).—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Not durable, and too small to be of much value. Not used. Scattered throughout the district.
- 67. Papauma.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Fairly durable, though too small to be of value. Not used. Small quantities throughout the district.
- 70. Yellow-wood.—Grows on mountain-sides. Not durable; too small to be of any value. Not used. Not uncommon in high country.
- 72. Large Milk-tree.—Grows on river-flats, good soil. Fairly durable; clean, straight, tough. Suitable for axe-handles and such-like. Not used. Rare; odd trees found throughout the district.
- 73. Heketara.—Rocky cliffs and river-banks. Too small to be of any use, though fairly durable. Not used. Not uncommon, especially near Mount Frederick. Suitable for cultivation in garden; grows easily.
- 74. Akeake.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Very durable in North Island. Too small here for use. Not used. Not uncommon in Buller Valley.
- 75. Neinei.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Durable, though too small for use. Not used. Common throughout the district.
- 76. Mountain Neinei.—Grows from 2,000 ft. to 4,000 ft. above sea-level. Too small and scarce to be of any use. Not used. Confined to the mountain ranges. Not common.
- 77. Inaka.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Too small and scarce to be of any value. Not used. Scattered throughout the district.
- 78. Toro.—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Not durable when in contact with ground. Occasionally used as mine-props. Scattered throughout the district.
- 79. Matipou, or Mapau.—Grows near sea-coast, warm situations. Not durable. Excellent firewood. Not used. Rare, only a few odd trees found along coast. Good hedge-plant.
- 82. Ngaio.—Found along sea-coast north of Ngakawau River. Not durable or of any value. Too rare. Suitable for shrub-cultivation.
- 84. Houhere (Lacebark).—Grows on river-flats, banks, and good soil. Not durable. Should be suitable for paper-making. Not used. Easily cultivated as a garden-shrub.
- 85. Makomako (Wine-berry). Grows in new clearings, roadsides, river-banks. Not durable. Should be suitable for paper-making. Not used. Rapid in growth, requiring to be cut every year to keep clearing clean.
- 86. Tumatakuru.—Grows on sandhills and mountain-sides. Durable and tough, though too small to be of any value. Not used. Not common, occasionally seen on sandhills and in Buller Valley.
- 68. Puka (Broadleaf).—Grows on sea-coast and mountain-sides. Not durable. Not used. Common throughout the district.