POLICE AND PRISONS.

The criminal statistics accompanying this report deal with all offences reported during 1922, and show an aggregate net increase of 188 on the figures for 1921. This increase, as will be seen from the tables, is mainly in minor offences.

The proportion of offences to the population was 1.98 per cent. as against 1.52 per cent. for the previous year.

The percentage of arrests or summonses resulting from the total offences reported during the year was 96 per cent—the figures of the preceding year being 95 per cent.

was 96 per cent.—the figures of the preceding year being 95 per cent.

So far there are no confirmed criminals here of the type known in New Zealand and other countries. The communal customs and habits of the Samoans are responsible for many of the petty thefts committed.

During the year advantage was taken of the resignation of the Inspector (for health reasons) to reduce the commissioned officers of the Police Department to two—viz., a Commissioner of Police and a Sub-Inspector. As the Force lacked a man trained and experienced in the investigation of crime and offences, a detective-sergeant was secured on loan from the New Zealand Police Department.
