BILLETS.

If we join the army, just to go and fight the Hun,
And we work from early dawn to the setting of the sun,
How we sigh with soft contentment
when the mess is o'er,
As we tramp along to our billets' welcome door.
For a bath of pleasing temperature our kind attention waits,
And then in sheets enfolded we can laugh at all the fates, Secure from shrapnel clatter and the high explosive shock, Till our soldier-servant wakes us with his cry of "Six o'clock."
Not always thus we're billeted; the elements of chance Pervert that pleasant pastime known as "billeting in France";
To-day we're in a chateau and tomorrow on a farm,
A dug-out in the gun line, or the Y.M.C.A.'s holy calm.
The house of village cures or with the local Mayor, An attic in a granary, which we and vermin share;
Still we cannot help thinking, as our thoughts fly o'er the foam,
Of the truthness of the saying that "There's no place like home."

YPRES.

With Variations.

(Y.P.R.S. in "N.Z. at the Front.")
When the Boche sent his shells into EEP,
A timid young French chimney sweep Declared, when he woke from his sleep,
With horror he felt his flesh creep,
To hear the shells crashing down
In the heart of the town,
And the chimneys a-goin' so cheap.
—A la Francaise.

His wife, with one eye, was a sweeper
In the famous Cloth Hall of old EEPER,
And one day as she opened her peeper
To rouse up her lazy young sleeper,
She growled like a Turk
At the thought of her work,
While the Boches were still shelling EEPER.
—A la Belge.

Now this young chimney sweep,
In the city of EEP,
And his wife the tired sweeper,
Who called the place EEPER, Though sometimes a little bit snappy,
Were really contented and happy,
Till they took to strong drink,
And the reason, I think,
Was their hearing two tanked "Tommy"
swipers,
At the close of the day,
In an estaminet,
Making fun of the people of WIPERS!
—A l' Anglais.
