

Above: A little blue penguin, one of a band that dwelt under the woolshed, where some of the party slept.

Right top: A view south-east over Pelorou Sound showing the sweep of the long spine of Maud Island, with the home-stead and jetty nestling, to the right, under the hill.

Right middle: The southern ridge where taupatas were planted to extend the forested area habitat.

Below: On the circuit of the island there was a discussion on kakapo tracking, and the use of the tracking aerial was demonstrated by a Wildlife Service officer. In the background, to the north, is Port Ligar.
