

NEW ZEALAND'S NATURE HERITAGE

Royal Forest and Bird Protection Society
1988 Calendar

Forest and Bird's 1988 calendar highlights endangered species and their habitats throughout New Zealand – from the golden sedge plant pingao, kauri forest and our delightful songster the kokako, to blue duck and giant snails.

Similar in format to our beautiful World Heritage calendar, the 1988 calendar costs $11.00 (inc. GST and postage).

Buller's mollymawk, which breeds on the Chatham, Snares and Tokelau Islands. The name mollymawk is a corruption of the Dutch and English and not quite proximity to named because of the bird's character on land and lack of fear of humans.

Seal's Bay, Cook Strait, New Zealand's southern islands have vast numbers of seals, and endemic land birds. Both Cook Strait and Seal's Bay have been south sea islands, but will be forever vulnerable to the potential disaster of an accidental liberation.

As part of New Zealand's celebration of the Centennial of National Parks, Forest and Bird has produced five high quality posters, each exploring a natural theme – alpine, wetland, forest, tussock and maritime.

Produced on high quality paper, these magnificent posters will be sought-after momentos of the Centennial. The dramatic Snowball Glacier in Mt Aspiring National Park, the bronze tints of a wetland in front of Mt Cook, golden tussocks in Tongariro National Park, a northern rata in dense forest of Urewera National Park and an evocative sunset mirrored in rock pools, Motuihe Island, Hauraki Gulf Maritime Park – each poster depicts the diversity of our natural heritage.

Buy a set or buy them singly. Forest and Bird will deliver your posters in a strong cardboard cylinder to ensure they remain in good condition in the mail.

Only $17 a set (inc GST and postage and packaging) or $6 each (inc GST and postage and packaging).

See order form below.
