

Most people conceive of Antarctica as ice (above, the ice-cliffs of the Canada Glacier, Victoria Land); and penguins (far right, Emperor penguin chicks in Victoria Land, the volcano Mt Melbourne behind). However, a fascinating world of plants and other animals also lives there.

Algae around the edge of a lake on Ross Island. All photos: Paul Broady.