 A short feature introducing an eminent English gardening personality, C. H. Middleton
 The dingiest of city suburbs in England haunt their flowers in due season. There are flowers everywhere, flowers in a grimy window box trailing up a grimy window-frame; flowers in the blackened deposits of earth in the meanest of backyards. In rural England there are flowers in even greater profusion, and it is to all citizens, rich and poor, that the B.B.C. Gardening Talks are addressed and to whom they make an unflinching appeal. C. H. Middleton is England's greatest Gardening Personality.
