 "St. Paul's Suite" Holst
 There must be something stimulating in writing with only the immediate applause of schoolgirls in mind—particularly if it all comes off. It came off with Gustav Holst, whose "St. Paul Suite" is among the most successful things he has written. He composed it, in 1913, for the pupils of St. Paul's Girls' School, at Hammersmith, of which he had been music master since 1905; and they gave it the first performance.
