PARLIAMENT

Notes From The Gallery

(By Our Special Representative)

Beer for Bellamy's + Dogs and Beavers + Nice for the Maoris + Versatile + Having Fun

AT the beginning of every Parliament—that is, once every three years—members of the House of Representatives and the Legislative Council are asked to vote on the question whether liquor shall be purveyed in the precincts of Parliament Buildings; in other words, whether Bellamy's famous long beers will be on tap, among other things. The issue has been put beyond doubt this time. The vote was 88 for and 19 against, only four Legislative Councillors and 15 members of the Lower House voting against the "wets." On at least one occasion—in 1925—there was a drought, the required majority being obtained by the "drys."

The Alsatian Dog Bill Again

It has happened again. The Alsatian Dog Bill, with due formality, has been back to the Maori wars, and emphasised the fact that the descendants of the people against whom the loans were raised, were now helping to pay them off! Rather like hiring a man to punch you on the nose.

Blarney

The fascinating spectacle of a Scotsman teaching an Irishman something about the art of piling on the blarney was provided by the Acting Prime Minister (the Hon. P. Fraser), when he spoke of the Hon. J. G. Cobbe's effort in the financial debate. "He put it across in such a beautiful Irish brogue," said Mr. Fraser, "that even when he was criticising the Government I almost capitulated." Mr. Fraser admitted that there were parts of it he could not understand. It is certainly the case that the member for Manawatu, when he drops his voice and breaks out into his broadest brogue, almost requires an interpreter.

Magic?

If he were at the end of the Earth it would appear that any member of the House of Representatives whose pet subject was being discussed would immediately know all about it and come rushing to the rescue. To the galleries it seems as if some magic operates to bring Mr. Semple in when someone is talking public works, or Mr. Jones when guns are mentioned, or Dr. McMillan when health or hospitals are in the air. Perhaps the whips and the messengers are the magicians.

Sally

At all events, when Mr. Bodkin (Opposition, Otago Central) referred to one of Dr. McMillan's points about the collection of Hospital Boards' fees, it was not long before the member for Dunedin West bounced back into the Chamber, facts and figures in his eager fist, mischief in his eye. Mr. Bodkin sought to turn the tables by making a sarcastic reference to Dr. McMillan's visits to the Departmental Head, but he had them turned on himself when Dr. McMillan suggested that there would be less risk of Mr. Bodkin's misinforming the House if he also made use of authoritative information.

Sortie

But the laugh that greeted this sally was nothing to the irrepressible laugh raised by the Opposition member who complained that the closing of the Health Department offices over week-ends created so much difficulty in the registration of urgent maternity cases that he had on occasions found it necessary "to do the job himself." The Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Fraser) assured him that this would be attended to.

passed by the Legislative Council, and the Hon. C. J. Carrington, of Auckland, can chalk up another score. He is now just one short of double figures. The Bill has been referred to the Lower House, in charge of C. Morgan Williams (Government member for Kaiapoi), a back-bencher, who possesses progressive ideas about credit control, has Quaker sympathies, and a resolute determination not to be parted from the only beard in the House.

Shades of 1860!

High finance, as a rule, is a subject that Maori members of the House leave alone, but E. T. Tirikatene (Southern Maori) unexpectedly touched the other day on the loan that Mr. Nash recently arranged, or re-arranged, at Home. He pointed out to the House that included in the loan were two amounts dating
