 9.25 TALK by Professor L. G. Pocock: "Points from the Satires of Juvenal"

Juvenal (first and second Centuries A.D.), was the greatest satirist of ancient Rome, and his satires are of priceless value as pictures of Roman life under the Empire. He is the satirist of indignation. There is a melancholy interest in comparing his picture of the follies and vices of his time with conditions in our own era.

 "Suite for Two Clarinets"

Frank
 There are many fine clarinet players, but few can be called great interpretative artists. Frederick Thurston is one of the exceptions. Not only does he possess perfect technical mastery over his instrument, but he is a musician of deep convictions and unusual sensitiveness. He had his first lessons on the clarinet from his father, and then won an open scholarship to the Royal College of music, and studied under that great clarinettist, Charles Draper. He has played in Britain's finest orchestras and is now a professor at his old college, the R.C.M.

Photograph by a New Zealand tourist of one of the many posters advertising an anti-Jew Exhibition in Vienna, August, 1938. The purpose of the Exhibition was to prove that the Jew was in the pay of the Soviet and was therefore an enemy of the Nazi State. It would be interesting to know what happened to these posters in September, 1939.
