 "Down in the Forest" Landon Ronald

The late Sir Landon Ronald's most popular song was a kind of musical afterthought. It comes from his song-cycle, called "The Cycle of Life," and was included after the work had been approved and purchased by the publisher, Enoch. An additional song seemed to be called for in the middle of the album, and the author, Harold Simson, provided the verses, which Ronald set to music inside half-an-hour. Neither com-

Nearly everybody, at some time or other, has occasion to be interested in the law, and at the moment the law of war as it affects neutral shipping and mine-laying is very much in the news. The Editor of the New Zealand Law Journal will deal with this aspect of the "Law of War" in his talk from 2YA on Monday, December 11, at 7.40 p.m.

poser nor publisher thought very much of the song, but luckily for them the public had other ideas on the subject.
