 Recordings:
 Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Bruno Walter,
 "Leonora Overture No. 3" Beethoven
 8.14 Dawn Harding (mezzo-soprano),
 Song Cycle: "Frauenliebe" ("Woman's Life and Love") Schumann

The Song Cycle has been defined as a string of songs of related thought and congruous musical style, capable of being sung consecutively and being felt to constitute an entity. The great "Lied" period of German song, following on English examples of at least two centuries earlier, established the Song Cycle. This form is still a favourite with composers. It usually consists of the lyrics of one poet. "Woman's Life and Love" was published in 1843.
