

SERVICEMEN AT PLAY: Any

THIS does not pretend to be a picture of any particular servicemen's club anywhere in New Zealand: it is, however, a composite impression, by a young New Zealand cartoonist now in the Army, of what he has seen at such places up and down the country; and he claims that the incidents, and the types, which he has drawn here will be readily recognised. The general effect is of harmless, though fairly strenuous amusement. There are the dancers who persist in "jitter-bugging" to the inconvenience of couples with more sedate tastes who are just drifting around, more interested in one another, or in conversation, than in violent exercise. On the sidelines are those who aren't interested in dancing, those who are resting between bouts, those who

to, bu
row c
of "w
these
euph
room