Firemen as Housemaids

"[I]N Doncaster, firemen will not only put out your fire for you, but after they have done so, will see that your house gets a thorough spring-cleaning. They send in a squad of expert cleaners to leave you spick and span, even going so far as to clean your chimneys and wash your windows—and all free of charge. They're trying, says their chief, to put a 'human touch into fire-fighting.'"—Georgie Henschel in the BBC's Pacific Service series "In Britain Today."
