

'THE LISTENER' CROSSWORD

(Solution to No. 447)

Clues Across

- You want a universal remedy? Try a canape—properly mixed, of course.
- "He that is down needs fear no fall. He that is down, no —" (John Bunyan)
- The agent loses his head, but is still a man of parts.
- Is angry with a scented shrub.
- Surrounded, appropriately, by pig fat, the boar provides us with old-fashioned S down.
- Ageless message.
- "The — of Society," by Ibsen.
- If hard, tough; i.e., bold.
- What they will be.
- Be seated in some confusion in the midst of the dance, this lends enchantment.
- "And, like a — 15 across, the morn From black to red began to turn." ("Hudibras," by Samuel Butler)
- It never does this, but it pours.
- Stray follower of Bacchus.
- Put one's clothes on again as reparation.

Clues Down

- "of one whose hand, Like the base Indian, threw a — away Richer than all his tribe." ("Othello," Act 5, Sc. 2).
- Parent's sister is upset over the meeting, of course.
- This punishment is frowned upon by some, including the N.C.O. himself, no doubt.
- Convince, its equally certain.
- Any one does in a storm.
- Bello asked Miranda if she remembered one.
- Pleased, in a way.
- "I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows, . . . Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine With sweet musk-roses, and with —" ("A Midsummer Night's Dream," Act 2, Sc. 1).
- Red trout, apparently twisted in agony.
- Don't flatter yourself that there aren't plenty of others on the beach.
- "The purpose of playing, whose end . . . is to hold, as 'twere, the — up to nature." ("Hamlet," Act 3, Sc. 2)
- Slackens.
- Wordsworth likened Milton's soul to one.
