 "Two Lyric Pieces" ... Grieg

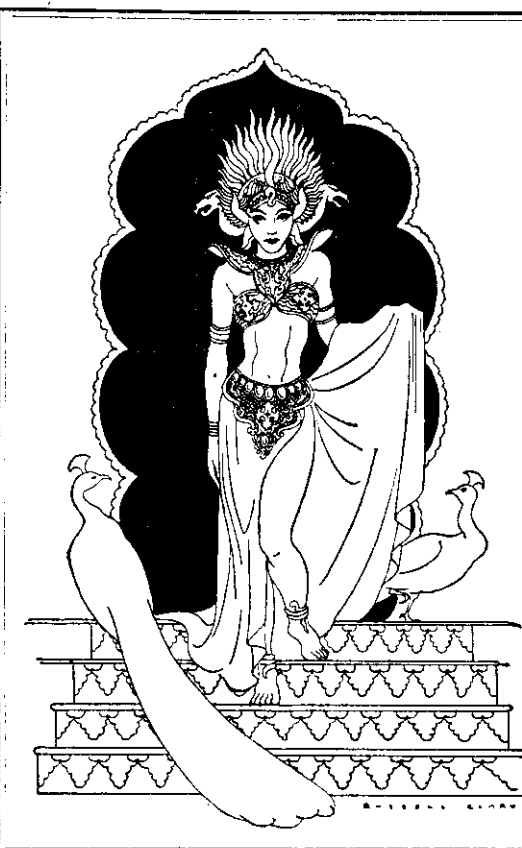

"Phaeton" is the second of Saint-Saens's Symphonic Poems, and is inspired by a mythological tale, the gist of which is given in a prefatory note in the orchestral scene. The work is based on the story of how Phaeton persuaded his father, the Sun, to let him drive the fiery Chariot across the sky. The horses got out of hand and the chariot was on the point of crashing into the Earth to wreck it when Jupiter hurled a thunderbolt which destroyed the youth and his car.
