The Deman String Quartet,
"German Dances" .. Schubert

The "Italian Serenade" of Hugo Wolf, the famous song composer, is one of his few instrumental works, and was composed originally as a string quartet. It is a bright little movement with a strumming rhythm and many a turn of phrase that sets the picture in the sunny south, with a subtle play of ideas that belong to the style of the string quartet rather than to that of song.

- "A distinguished composer devoted to the lighter forms of music is Eric Coates, whose entire orchestral output has been played sometime or other by the Queen's Hall Orchestra. It is a pity Coates has not discovered some librettist such as Sullivan found in Gilbert, for I am sure he might have carried on the Sullivan and Edward German traditions and have produced excellent English light operas." — Sir Henry Wood on Eric Coates.
