Prior to the Great War, Dr. H. Hayle, a practising physician, was thinking along the lines of attacking the basic or underlying cause of Asthma and Hay Fever. For years he had been interested in both Bronchial Asthma and Hay Fever, and had been making exhaustive researches into the literature of these two ailments. In addition, he had been making patient laboratory experiments searching for the true cause.

Almost from the first, he became convinced that Asthma and Hay Fever arose, not from an external, but an INTERNAL cause; that the cause exists within the individual himself, and that, although the two diseases manifest themselves in different ways, they both come from the same basic cause. This is borne out by the fact that a large number of people who at first have Hay Fever only later develop Asthma as well.

It was about this time that the glandular theory began to be developed. Dr. Hayle made an intensive and exhaustive study of the glands in their relationship to Asthma and Hay Fever, and eventually discovered that both these ailments are caused by an unbalanced condition of the Endocrine Glands.

There are, in the human body, two kinds of glands. The first of these glands pour their secretions through tubes or ducts, into some cavity. Such secretions usually function in the organ into which they are discharged. Other glands, on the contrary, have no ducts, and are for this reason, called ductless glands. Their secretions leave the glands by being absorbed into the blood vessels, in which they are carried everywhere that the blood goes. The ductless glands are called the Endocrine Glands. These glands operate the system much as petrol operates your car. When the fluids given off by the glands are inferior in quality, the normal balance of the system is overthrown, and an abnormal condition like asthma develops in certain types of people.

PROOF THAT OLD IDEAS ABOUT ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER ARE WRONG!

A favourite method of treating Asthma is to advise the patient to leave the community in which he lives and works, and go to some other climate. The same advice is often given in cases of Hay Fever. This is expensive, not always possible, and is only attempting to dodge rather than overcome the disease.

Another method of treating Hay Fever is by means of injections, with a preparation made from the pollen of various plants suspected of being the cause of the particular kind of Hay Fever with which the patient is suffering. This is expensive and often a painful treatment, which in nearly every case results in disappointment — another instance of treating the symptoms instead of the basic cause.

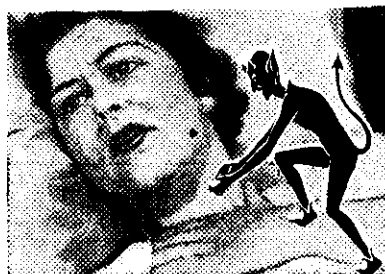

The real proof that old ideas as to the cause of Asthma and Hay Fever are wrong, is now found in the fact that thousands of cases have been given complete relief by means of a method of attacking what has been proved to be the BASIC or underlying cause of Bronchial Asthma and Hay Fever.

DR. HAYLE'S FIRST VICTORY OVER ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER

Soon after Dr. Hayle had completed his discoveries, a farmer suffering with both Hay Fever and Asthma came to him for relief. This farmer had been using inhalants, adrenalin, smoke powders, etc. The doctor was delighted at this opportunity to prove the truth of his theories, and prescribed the new treatment he had just worked out to overcome the cause of these two diseases. Although it was a hot and dusty season, after taking the treatment, this farmer went to work with a threshing crew, and actually threshed wheat the balance of the summer, with all the many millions of flying particles that always fill the air at threshing time. Yet, according to this man's own testimony, he never had another touch either of Asthma or Hay Fever.

The unnecessary use of narcotics to give temporary relief in the treatment of diseases is sure to eventually lower the vitality and resistance, and has caused many people to become dope fiends.
