

"JERRY'S" VISIT TO WELLINGTON

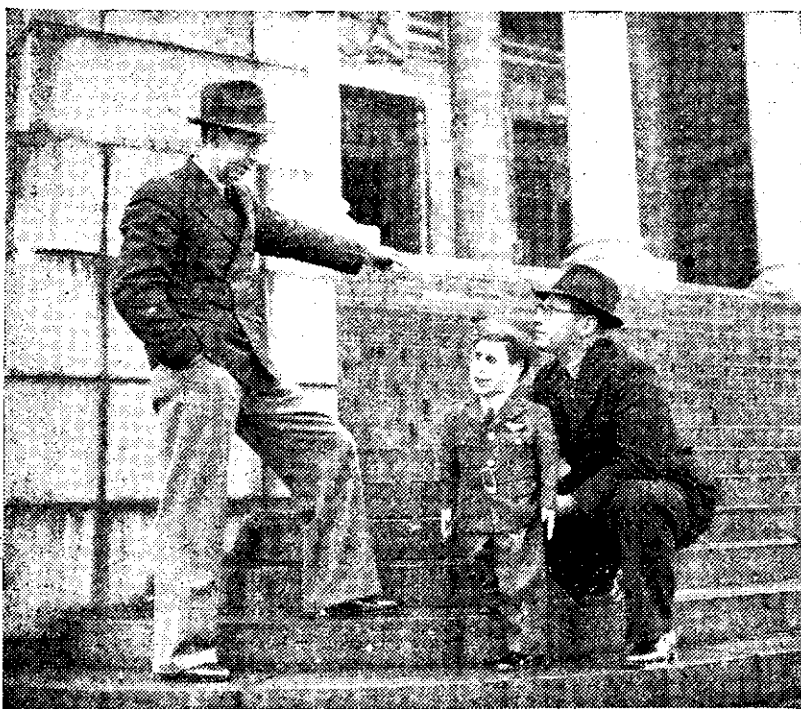

"Jerry" thanks his "pals" the engine-driver and fireman on the Auckland train, who have brought him safely to Wellington. George is chatting, too

"Don't be a 'twerp,' Dud. Of course I can sign my own name." "Jerry" signs the register at the Hotel St. George, while Dud (left), George (right), and the clerk look on

A visit to the 22B Studio was included in "Jerry's" programme for the day. He wanted to say "good-bye" to the children during the 5 o'clock session. Left to right: Lady Gay, "Jerry," George, Dud, and Bryan O'Brien

(Centre left): "Jerry," Dud and George during the concert at the Opera House on June 9. "Is it always windy in Wellington, Dud? I don't like it, it whistles through the knot-holes in my legs," was one of the wisecracks which "brought the house down"

"Jerry" visits Parliament Buildings

(Right): "Jerry" waves "au revoir" to his Wellington friends as he leaves by the Auckland Limited for his home town. His last remarks, as he watched a steward make up a bunk, were: "What's he doing, Dud?" Dud: "He's making up a bunk for a politician who is travelling with us to-night!" Jerry: "I thought politicians always made up their own bunk"
