

YOUR GARDEN AND MINE

By Ann Earncliff Brown: (No. 39)

DURING many weeks I have opened the French windows on to a chill and silent world — silent but alert and eager, for, as I scatter the first crumbs on frozen or rain-wet lawn, hosts of birds arrive. The grey-budded laburnum is alive with bickering sparrows; from bare cherry and willow boughs flock the finches; sombre pine and macrocarpa send the speckled thrush, sleek blackbird and rather dingy starling. Indoors, London is calling, telling of grievous things — wings of death in the air, possible famine and pestilence for Europe when winter comes. All this through the short days and cold nights of our winter: but though as I write the grass outside gleams with hoar frost, I know that to-morrow will bring the thrill of a new joy, for to-day, in the words of Siegfried Sassoon:

*"Everyone's voice was suddenly lifted,
And beauty came like the setting sun.
My heart was shaken with tears; and horror
Drifted away . . . O but everyone
Was a bird; and the song was wordless;
The singing will never be done."*

Yes! I realise that quite shortly I will be guarding precious seedlings from these joy givers — will later grudge the thrush, this morning fluting from the tip top of the tallest pine, his share of raspberries and currants.

Protective Measures

Already I suggest that if you have wire-netting guards for your young peas, you will set them over even fresh-sown seed, and the young green leaves so tempting to the birds. Should you use cotton to protect your planting, it is important to prevent the thread from wasteful tangling. To this end it is well worth while to make triangle supports to carry the strands. Form your triangles from flat 2in. strips of wood. In the middle of the base, nail a leg with sharpened foot. The size of your triangle will depend on the type of seed to be protected and the height of the variety of peas sown. On the sides of the triangle and at the apex, cut deep nicks, being careful to keep the lowest nick close to the soil surface. Make as many nicks as you desire rows of cotton. Dark thread is preferable to white. Also if you have any left-over enamel paint from your last spring cleaning, you can paint these triangles. Thus treated they last for many seasons, look quite gay in the garden, and keep your cotton in good condition.

Broad Beans

Broad beans do not require such protection. Those sown in the autumn do well if given some blood and bone manure. Hoe in well and draw the earth up close to the plants.

In warm soils, sowings of peas and broad beans can be made at regular intervals. Also if you raise your own plants, cauliflower, cabbage and celery seed should be sown. Peaches and nectarines must be pruned and sprayed with Bordeaux mixture as soon as possible.
