- Fletcher
- Percy Fletcher, who died in 1932, was a clever composer of the best type of popular music, a man of experience in every department of the theatrical profession, and one who knew every inch of the theatre from the box-office to the stage door—for years he was musical director of His Majesty's Theatre. He was, like his colleague, Eric Coates, born in the Midlands, at Derby. Apart from his music for the theatre, he produced a quantity of cleverly written, very tuneful and extremely popular music, of which this suite is a characteristic example.
