7.45 The Charles Brill Orchestra,
 "The World on the Moon"

Haydn's twenty-four operas, including five for representation in marionette shows, are seldom discussed by his biographers for the simple reason very little seems to be known about them in English-speaking countries. But we can rest assured that a man of the mentality and love of fun such as Haydn would be equal to composing what to-day we would call musical comedies. Haydn's thirteen Italian operas were all produced within a quarter of a century (1769 to 1794), and "The World on the Moon" was one of them. This work had spoken dialogue interspersing the musical numbers.
