 In 1928 Serge Krish founded his Septet which has been broadcasting at the BBC regularly ever since. He does all his own arranging, and the Septet is often on the air several times a month. He is pianist, violinist, conductor, composer, teacher, above all idealist, for well known as he is, it may be that in the future he will be best remembered for founding the New Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra, which has given work to musicians in need of it and serious music to the poorer people of London.
