Throughout the years, the deep, sonorous voice of Big Ben, the great bell in the famous Clock Tower of the British Houses of Parliament, strikes the hours with unfailing regularity for all the world to hear.

It weighs 13 tons. It was first hung in 1856, and cost £40,000. It is named after Sir Benjamin Hall, First Commissioner of Works at that time. The clock is popularly called Big Ben, too. The dial is 22 feet in diameter.

BELL... the TEA

that always tastes better, refreshes faster, and costs less to use.
