In a Continental Inn, Mignon, a member of a gipsy troupe, is about to be beaten by her master, Glarno, for refusing to dance, when Wilhelm Meister, a wealthy young man, offers to buy her. Glarno accepts, and Mignon, dressed as a page, accompanies Wilhelm to a castle. In the meantime, Wilhelm meets the coquettish actress Filina, who ridicules Wilhelm's page, with the result that he tells Mignon that she must leave his service. In the castle grounds Mignon meets the insane old singer Lothario, and impelled by jealousy, she wishes that the castle may be set on fire by lightning. Lothario overhears her, and sets fire to the castle, and Mignon, who is in the burning building, is saved by Wilhelm, who realises he loves her. It is now discovered that Mignon is the daughter of the insane Lothario, who is really the Marquis de Cipriani, and who has been seeking for her since she was stolen by the gipsies long ago. Mignon finds happiness in the arms of her father and her lover, Wilhelm.
