- The ardent Count Almaviva has fallen in love with Rosina, the pretty ward of Doctor Bartolo, who wants to marry her himself. So far, Almaviva is known to Rosina only under the assumed name of Lindoro. After a serenade and an exchange of letters, he disguises himself as a tipsy dragoon, and manages to get into Bartolo's house by the aid of Figaro, the general factotum. But his scheme is foiled by the entrance of the guard, who arrest the would-be wooer. In the second act, he appears as deputy for Basilio, the singing master, said to be sick, in order to gain the Doctor's confidence, he produces one of Rosina's letters to himself, declaring that it was given to him by a mistress of Count Almaviva. Bartolo takes the letter, thinking to inflame Rosina's jealousy by telling the scandal to Rosina, whose disappointment nearly frustrates the Count's deep-laid scheme. Happily, Count Almaviva secures an interview with Rosina, convinces her of his constancy, and induces her to elope before Bartolo has discovered the trick that has been played upon him.
