Anna Again

VARIETY, the journal of the American entertainment industry, summed it up: "Anna Russell Longhair Takeoffs Wow Audience"—which in a fairly free translation means that Anna Russell's audience was amused more than somewhat at her parodies of the classics. No need to say, of course, who Anna Russell is, but 1YC's audience is expected to be wowed when she takes the air at 9.34 p.m. on Monday, February 1, to analyse Wagner's The Ring of the Nibelungs. Miss Russell's recording company is almost certainly right when it claims that she emerges with some observations "that will startle even the erudite." From the moment she introduces the Rhine Maidens—"a sort of aquatic Andrews Sisters"—Miss Russell is quite at home with her subject.
She gives a good deal of attention to an exposé of Siegfried's relationships, with his many aunts—so much, indeed, that those who don't know The Ring may be inclined to doubt her word that she's not "making it up."

"BE patient with your teenager when she is 'bored, bored, bored!' She's not being naughty or difficult. She's right. The world is calling her and it's a different world from ours—not a world full of dangers and difficulties, but one full of mystery, adventure, experience.
It's just as cruel to hold a teenager back from trying her wings, as it is to deny food to a toddler."—Gilda Lund, a housewife, in a BBC programme.
