LARK HILL

THEN tell me how the tides
Flow in over the sand,
For it is a long time ago
And I have forgotten.

The tree and the rock
Are still there? Tree,
Rock and hill are mind's bone,
Holding me firm.

And bird come back,
You were shut out from time;
Wing-brush like dead leaves
Was lost in storm.

Net of a summer hill,
Too soon abloom,
Will cast over sea-flats,
Open day's shell.

In a year's turn the young
Leaf the young leaf is gone;
To each that is loved
Is given meaning.

But play without pattern
Has taken long;
I, no young lover, pray
Time to turn, witness

This sweet defeat.
So prove to the mouthed stone,
Cry out under the split sky,
All, all is unbound.

Spring has no season.
Tide-skin over wet sand,
Flesh firm over bird-bone,
The tree and the rock saw, forever.
