FLIES breed trouble

don't give them a chance to breed at all

Plan an all-out campaign this summer against this airborne menace.

Houseflies lay their eggs in manure and in fermenting vegetable matter.

GRASS CUTTINGS are a favourite breeding spot. Care should be taken therefore to see that grass cuttings are:

- (1) Placed in a properly constructed compost heap at once.
- (2) Covered with earth in a prepared trench. (This is good gardening practice).
- (3) Spread out to dry.
- (4) Put in a prepared pit and covered. (Sacking soaked in waste engine oil makes a good cover for this and also for the compost heap).

Keep refuse of all kinds protected against flies. Half-hearted and incomplete measures are useless.

DESTROY ADULT FLIES WHEREVER YOU CAN

Use traps, fly poisons, sprays; also residual sprays on surfaces where flies rest or crawl—window frames and sills, hanging light fixtures and drop cords, edges and arches of doors, and on the rubbish tin, too.

If you want to dodge dysentery and summer sickness this summer keep all food-stuffs and eating utensils adequately covered.
