 7.0 Muzio Clementi, born on January 24, 1752
 IDA CARLESS (piano)
 Sonatas No. 3 in G, Op. 37, No. 2 in B Flat, Op. 38, No. 3 in F, Op. 38 (Studio)
 Clementi, one of the great pianists and pedagogues of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, occupies a place in the history of piano music not unlike that of Cherubini in operatic and orchestral composition. Each exerted great influence on composers who later overshadowed him to such a degree that his own excellent creative work became almost forgotten. It was after hearing Clementi's works that Mozart began to broaden his style of piano writing. Likewise, the influence of Clementi's piano style was a determining factor in Beethoven's evolution as a composer for that instrument. It has frequently been averred that the art of modern piano playing rests upon Clementi's volume of piano studies, Gradus ad Parnassum.
