

IRISH GIRLS IN AMERICA.

THE following beautiful tribute to the Catholicity and patriotism of our Irish girls in America is an excerpt from a letter of Dr. A. M. Hogan in the Newark 'Irish Citizen':

"The splendid temples and steeples that rise in their greatness and grandeur through the cities and through the country are the work of their hands, nor is it possible for us to enter their portals without viewing in admiration the amount of their labor and in admiration reflecting on the devoted Irish girls who are universally admitted to be the principal contributors to the convents, churches and cathedrals that are fastly rising in this land. The lofty domes and towers from which peal forth the 'Angelus' bells were raised by their hard earned money and not by the rich or the wealthy, whatever in the main to them may be due. To the Irish girls in this country is owing that America is fastly emulating the oldest Catholic countries on earth, and the link which unites Ireland at home and Ireland in the grand Western Republic is hourly growing stronger and stronger; and who doubts but that it shall still grow and strengthen till the millions of the scattered Celtic race shall unite in one grand shout for the freedom and independence of the Emerald Isle?"
