

“Gert and Daisy” Greet You

There's not a listener in New Zealand who hasn't heard “Gert and Daisy,” the two girls whose Cockney sketches have made them world-famous. In real life these clever B.B.C. stars are Elsie and Doris Waters, and on this page they send their Christmas greetings to New Zealand listeners.

To the Editor of the “Radio Record”—

Many thanks for your letter—we are only too pleased to send a message of Christmas greetings to New Zealand listeners.

First of all will you give them our love, and secondly will you tell them what great pleasure it gives us to know that they enjoy our work on radio and records. It came as a pleasant surprise to us to discover that we were known in New Zealand, because one is rather apt to visualise one's listening public in the British Isles only, when, of course wireless has made neighbours of us all.

“Gert and Daisy” send their love, too. They also hope they have revived happy memories of London and the Cockney for all exiled Londoners, and for some of your dear lads who knew London when they came over here during the war. Thank you for your good wishes. We only hope our listeners in the Antipodes will always enjoy listening to us.

With our kindest wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Elsie & Doris Waters
