Great Love of Nelson and Lady Hamilton

His cold, greedy wife refused to divorce him, so though he called Emma his Guardian Angel and the officers of his flagship drank a nightly toast to her, he was never able to make her his wife. They paid dearly for their outlawed happiness.

But Nelson's last writing before Trafalgar was to Emma: "I will take care that my name shall be ever most dear to you."

Almost his last words, gasping his life away: "Take care of my poor Lady Hamilton, Hardy."

The barge that bore his body from Greenwich to Whitehall on the last voyage of all had Emma's portrait painted in the stern.

Saying goodbye to her on his way to death he told her: "If there were more Emmas there would be more Nelsons."

He might—who knows?—have counted Westminster well lost.

Such is the charm of romance back of the scenes in the lives of most renowned men. It is of such material as this that the romance of Robert Clive and his beloved Marguerite, is built. This tender love story, and other adventures, are beautifully presented in United Artists' new 20th Century production, "Clive of India." Ronald Colman portrays Clive, with Loretta Young as Marguerite.

Wireless—Pastime for "Cranks"

it again became known as 4YA. B stations began to make their appearance on the air about this time, until two years ago six of these smaller broadcasters, along with the A station, provided a regular service for the growing body of listeners.

Some time ago, however, one B station dropped from the ranks, but shortly afterwards the Dunedin auxiliary station, 4YO, took its place amongst the air entertainers of the city.

In the twenty-five years that his Majesty has been on the throne, wireless has seen a remarkable growth in Dunedin—it has developed from the crude experimental stages of the early years of the twentieth century to its present state of advancement.

Household Hints

FOR a really hot mustard with an original flavour, mix the mustard with piquant sauce instead of water.

TO simplify the removal of skewers from meat, fasten a loop of strong string through metal skewers. A sharp tug on the string will remove them easily.

TO clean a sofa or armchair that cannot be easily taken out into the open air and beaten, or better still treated with a vacuum cleaner, try this method: Soak a sheet in warm water, wring as dry as possible, and throw it over the chair. Beat thoroughly with a stick or carpet beater. The dust will all remain on the damp sheet instead of flying about the room.

TO improve the flavour of dried prunes, add a few dates when stewing them and a pinch of cinnamon and mixed spice.

TO remove linoleum without cracking it rub the linoleum over with warm linseed oil, and roll with the right side outside. Rub off every trace of the oil after relaying.

TO move pickled eggs, remove the eggs from the waterglass solution and pack in sawdust. Treat the eggs one at a time, so that they are as little exposed to the air as possible. Transfer to a fresh solution of pickle as soon as possible.
