In a Nutshell

BEN GROSS, radio critic of the "New York Daily News," classes outstanding American bands thusly: Paul Whiteman's Orchestra is the best for concert arrangements; Dick Himber's for graceful sophistication; "Cab" Calloway's for hot rhythm; Benny Goodman's for "swing" music; Fred Waring for novelties; Andre Kostelanetz for soloists' musical background; Wayne King's for most soothing melodies; George Hall's for the most original use of vocalists; Guy Lombard's for its slow tempi; Glen Gray's, for its rhythm; Ben Bernie's for comedy; Abe Lyman's for his peppy dance tempi (even though Lyman has attempted to lift a certain Waltz King's crown)—and Eddy Duchin for his featured piano arrangements. So now you know.

WAGNER is credited with being the first composer to insist that real mutes should be used for brass instruments instead of pieces of rolled-up rag or paper.
