"HULLO, London. Are you there?" If anyone thought there was an inhuman quality about the voice that spoke those lines over the NBC-Blue network recently, that discerning listener was right. The voice came from a machine that produces words through various mouth pieces corresponding to the larynx, tongue and palate. The broadcast was short-waved from London.

WBRE, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has now become an NBC outlet supplementary to both the NBC-Blue and Red networks. The addition brings the total number of NBC stations to 144.
