Test Cricket Broadcast

London, referred to the splendid reputation of the New Zealand team at Home and to their very fine performance in the field during the play that day. The wicket was slow and easy, and in a very sporting way said that the run of luck had been with the Englishmen.

When the attempts at two-way communication were not going over, music was played from the 2YA studio.

FOR the second day, the technicians requested that the relay line should be kept in circuit all the time; consequently arrangements were made for Mr. Ball to speak continuously in case the transmission came through at any moment. Accordingly Mr. Ball prepared a very complete summary of the relationships in cricket between Britain and New Zealand, and in the course of this talk, which lasted for over an hour, gave a very complete review.

Conditions, however, were very much better than they had been on the previous morning, and while conversation was strictly limited, it was possible to hear the remarks that were being made from London. The first speaker was Mr. A. T. Donnelly, chairman of the New Zealand Cricket Council, who introduced Mr. Gilligan. He commented on the consideration the English Cricket Council had shown in arranging for the extra Test matches at great inconvenience to themselves. The New Zealanders had received every hospitality throughout the tour.

Mr. Gilligan said that the second day's play had been most interesting. He then spoke of the outstanding features of the day, and also of the coming tour of the Australian team next season. New Zealand had recovered well, for conditions were against a big score.

The New Zealand captain, Mr. T. C. Lowry, said that in losing the toss, he had failed in one of the duties of a captain and consequently the English had the better of the wicket. They still hoped to save the match on the morrow.

Mr. A. P. F. Chapman recalled the English team's visit to New Zealand, and sent the best wishes of his wife (formerly of New Zealand) and himself to friends in this country. He said there was talk of an M.C.C. tour to New Zealand two years hence, and it was greatly hoped that it would eventuate. The New Zealanders were making a golden name for themselves. It was hard luck that Dempster could not play, and the English were disappointed. He could not refer to Lowry's play because he was one of the family, but he had his own ideas about that.

Mr. D. R. Jardine, captain of the English team, commenting on the play, said that Lowry had played one of the finest innings seen at the oval for many, many years.

FOR the third day, the technicians thought that a quarter of an hour's continuous contact with the relay lines would be satisfactory and that the studio could transmit music until London came through.

Accordingly arrangements were made for Mr. Broad (of the Cricket Council) to give a history of Test matches between both England and Australia as well as New Zealand. Mr. Broad spoke interestingly for some 25 minutes, after which music was transmitted up till 8 o'clock, when London came with the greatest success yet achieved. London was heard to great advantage for something over 20 minutes, but London could not receive New Zealand. However, the transmission was almost brilliantly successful from London, and New Zealand listeners were given a rare treat. There were present in the studio Mrs. Dempster and Mrs. James, who both had the pleasure of hearing their sons speak from London.

A few minutes after eight o'clock the London exchange announced that connection had been made with the Grand Central Hotel, and shortly afterward Mr. A. H. H. Gilligan commenced his summary. The New Zealanders, he said, had done their best to save the match, but the luck had not been with them. The crowd was treated to a brilliant display by Vivian and Blunt. The spectators were very thrilled by his exhibition. The wicket had never been easy for play all the way. Had Lowry won the toss the result of the match might have been altogether different. Gilligan congratulated the New Zealand captain on the way he had handled his side, and said that English cricketers and critics had formed a very high opinion of the team's capabilities.

Mr. R. C. Blunt was the next speaker. He said that the performance of the team had given the greatest satisfaction to the players themselves, as they had been up against a very hard side.

Mr. C. S. Dempster said that he was very disappointed to have been out of the match. He had spent two days in bed, but his heart had been with the New Zealand team. Fortunately, he had practically recovered from his injury, and he hoped to be able to play next Wednesday and in the third Test.

Mr. K. C. James also spoke. Mr. Cecil Wray, the New Zealand Rugby Union's representative in England, said that New Zealanders at Home were very delighted with the New Zealand team and their play in the Test. They had been given a wonderful reception wherever they had gone. Football was not on the map just at present, but he expected that the Dominion would receive the amended rules soon, and thought they would provide some very interesting discussion among Rugby people in New Zealand. Atmospheric conditions became unfavourable toward the end of the broadcast, and two-way conversation was again out of the question.
