Radio's latest and greatest sensation is incorporated in the new 1933 Stewart-Warner—RADIO a year ahead of its time! AUTOFLOW POWER can best be described as the automatic control of volume, maintaining the programmes of both near and distant stations at the standard strength desired, eliminating fading and blasting. This new power is the result of successful research by Stewart-Warner Engineers and was arrived at by the introduction of four new types of valves, two of which are one thousand times more sensitive and efficient than those in use two years ago. Another of these valves embodies a wonderful device which develops from a powerful signal a new force which is directed against excessive noises. For sheer clarity of tone and brilliant reception, Stewart-Warner has always been unequalled, while now, the marvellous improvements added to an already superlative set, widens further the gap between Stewart-Warner and the next best. You must SEE it—you must HEAR it! Produced in New Zealand by New Zealand labour.
