THOSE of you who are choosing winter clothes will be delighted with the designs on this page. This is a season when to be chic is to be individual. No hard and fast rules can be laid down as to the position of the waist-line or the skirt length, but see to it that your waist-line is where it is most becoming to your figure.

The long close princess line appears to be the effect most women are striving for, and the design 2032 is a charming model on these lines. Buttoned up to the neck and fashioned in herring-bone tweed, it is one of the smartest of the season's modes. Neck lines are creeping higher and higher, some almost reaching the ears. Many of the new coats button right up to the chin, and there are delightful scarf collars that swathe the throat. The costume with the hip length jacket is very popular, and the three-quarter length coat is also seen. Hats are small, some have brims which dip well down over the eyes. The back of the head is much exposed, and this necessitates a short neat coiffure.

Plaids and checks are having a great run, and these are being put to numerous uses. Dresses, too, are being made of tartan; scarves and gloves are trimmed with it. 1970 shows a striking model in tartan or check, the epaulettes on sleeves in plain colours, giving width to the shoulders.

2233 is a style that will appeal to many and will be found quite simple to make in the new flecked fabrics.
