

e interesting openings for women.

Fire crew, medical teams, aircraft mechanics, avionic technicians and drivers. And many more besides.

The Air Force trains the lot to exacting standards.

Afterall when our aircraft go up, we don't want them to come down in a hurry.

The training is as broad as it is deep. For example, Air Force drivers, at the completion of their training, are licenced to drive practically anything that moves.

Our telecommunications operators are fully conversant with teleprinters, telex, fax, and radio.

And our chefs are trained to London City and Guild standards.

The opportunities are virtually limitless.

So if you fancy filling the above or any other position in today's Air Force, talk to your local recruitment officer.

You'll find it more than just an opening — it's a great step forward for young people in New Zealand.

Women and men alike.

AIR FORCE

More than you ever imagined.
