- 34 Selwyn had already planned (see his letter dated 21 January 1857 in 'Letters from Bishop Selwyn . . .', v. 2, p. 295) to have Hobhouse at Nelson, Hadfield at Wellington and Abraham at Auckland. 'I shall then have coadjutors in whom my heart would rejoice . . . I would work Melanesia . . . until old age and infirmity makes me resign the field into Coley's [Patteson's] hands.' Hadfield had 'reluctantly' let his name go forward to the Archbishop of Canterbury in March 1857 and withdrew his original acceptance in December. (W. P.
