

Charles Heaphy, 'View of the Kahu-Kahu Hokianga River. 1839', ink and watercolour, 30.7 × 41 cm. Alexander Turnbull Library.

...and the natives who were to be seen scattered about the banks of the river, were all dressed in their native attire, and some were armed with bows and arrows, and others with spears and clubs. The houses were built of wood, and were situated on the banks of the river, and the people were seen to be engaged in various occupations, such as fishing, and other pursuits.

Augustus Earle, 'The E. O. Racky [i.e. Horeke] or Deptford Dockyard, on the E. O. Keangha [i.e. Hokianga] River, N. Zealand 1828', watercolour, 25.1 × 47.5 cm. Rex Nan Kivell Collection, (N.K. 12/138), National Library of Australia, Canberra.

