Sir Apirana Ngata and the Maori Revival

Three talks in which Graham Butterworth sets out why he considers Sir Apirana Ngata to be the greatest Maori leader of the 20th century. Mr Butterworth believes "there are in history rare individuals whose life seems to symbolise their society and whose career manages to shape the lives of their contemporaries. Sir Apirana Ngata was one of these people. For the Pakeha, his fame has faded somewhat since his death in 1950. To many Maoris, especially those of the East Coast, he is still one of the great figures in their lives."

Sir Apirana Ngata And Those Who Remember Him

From our Radio New Zealand Sound Archives we hear again: Sir Apirana giving a message of thanks to Professor Shelly for work done in recording old Maori chants; Sir Apirana speaks at a gathering at Poho-O-Rawiri meeting house; William Ngata talks about Maori music; Chant sung at Sir Apirana Ngata's death; Eulogy in English and Maori delivered by Wiremu Paaka; Eulogy by Princess Te Puea; Tributes by Rev. Bennett, J. McEwen, Eric Ramsden and T.E.Y. Seddon; Opening of the Ngata Memorial College and singing of the school hymn.
