

Conference call.

Community health, a topic that concerns the Maori people especially, will be featured at a major conference in Christchurch in May.

The Community Health Workers' Conference will be a time for community workers from all parts of the country to share their information and ideas and also think about directions.

The significance of the conference is especially important in view of the cut-backs in institutionalised government health spending in favour of more community care. Thus the ball is in the community workers courts to plan health services.

The conference runs from May 20 to May 22 and will be held at Hagley High School, Christchurch.
