Tu Tangata magazine is spreading its net, gathering information about happenings in the Maori world. We're always pleased at the magazine to receive well-presented articles from readers about something that they think will interest other readers.

We're even more pleased when photographs accompany the articles as many readers are starting to do. Some of the topics readers are writing about are: family reunions like the Retara's (March issue); restoration or re-siting of meeting houses like Ngawari at Mangatu; and profiles of people, readers think are important in their community.

So if your group is having trouble getting funds because its work is unsung, write a piece with a photograph for Tu Tangata. You'll be surprised at the results.
