

FASHION NOTES

by M.O. Elliott

When going to the showers, please wear
 A sleep-tossed coiffure for your hair,
 A dressing-gown in shades of blue,
 Pyjamas in a pinkish hue,
 Or else in fawn with mauve reverses,
 Is sure to catch the guard house leers.
 For when it dawns a perfect
 day,
 This ensemble is O.K.,
 But when there brews a fearful storm
 In felt hat and a stout ground-sheet,
 And bare will be her corn-wracked feet,
 And, as beneath this suit
 she huddles,
 She sallies forth amid the puddles.
 If there's no breeze, then she's all right,
 But if there is—Oh! What a sight?
 For, blown up like a parachute,
 The ground-sheet traitor turns, the brute!
 This clothing is considered wise,
 If men would but avert their eyes.
 'Twere best to travel via tanks.

I give you, sir, my humble thanks
 For interest so well expressed.
 Re what Waacs wear to look well-dressed.

(Written in reply to an enquirer whose interest was aroused by the Fashion Notes in the last issue of Papakura Parade.)

BRAIL ?

No doubt Sgt. B. Taylor looks a frail led but we don't think he looks so delicate that Waac Elliott needs help him carry his pal through the camp.
